INTRODUCTION

To make the process of teaching and learning easier, various tools are needed. The textbook, which is a crucial tool and the subject of this essay, is one of these tools. A textbook is a book that has a thorough compilation of information in a field of study with the goal of explaining it. Textbooks are a crucial component of the educational process. Sadly, some people claim that they are a waste of money and are not necessary for learning. This is untrue, though, as they have a wide range of applications and advantages for both teachers and pupils. Both teachers and students can benefit from textbooks. They ought to be made available to and easily accessible by both professors and students. Students could learn more effectively and thoroughly as a result of making the teaching process much simpler.

MAIN PART

A textbook is a book that contains comprehensive information about a course or a subject that a student needs, to get through the academic year. This has a set of chapters, question-answers, and exercises included in the curriculum to improve the learning standards of a student.

Textbooks are not only helpful for the students but also helpful for new teachers with their teaching course. It acts as a guide for the syllabus material they have to cover in the entire academic year. Textbooks help teachers to design the lesson plan and enable a hassle-free teaching and learning experience.

Further, textbooks help teachers to maintain uniformity in teaching standards for different classes.

Benefits of Using Textbooks

1. Textbooks serve as a guide to the prescribed curriculum and syllabus. They ensure that topics covered are similar across different schools and states.
2. It transmits knowledge, skills, attitudes and values to the teacher and student alike.
3. It provides guidelines for teaching and learning. So, the teacher knows what is expected when teaching particular topics. They also know the best approach to help students assimilate better.
4. Textbooks save time and energy when searching for information since it is a source of the material. They are an easily accessible reference point. It is a readily available source of information.
5. Using textbooks makes teaching various subjects systematic as it is arranged according to themes. For this reason, it is easier for students to follow the lessons and understand them better.
6. They play major roles for weak students to achieve good grades as they are able to read on their own in more details..
7. It is a reliable point of reference. Because they are properly researched and therefore credible, while most information on the internet are added randomly.
8. Provides students with several examples, activities and experiments related to the topics so they can understand better.
9. Textbooks are illustrated so students are able to picture and visualize concepts.
10. They are a footpath and lighthouse as they provide detailed information and also provides references in case students or teachers require further information.<sup>1</sup>

A good teacher's book lays out the basic principles of the coursebook and the recommended procedures for using the book. As such is it a guide for teachers, particularly novice teachers who may have little teacher training or classroom experience. It is like the instruction manual that comes with a new car. Once you are familiar with the car you won't need to consult the manual very often. However with a course book the situation is a little different, since books are used in many different contexts and the information in the teacher's book is likely to be very general and may need to be adapted to match the specific school context. It should be regarded as a springboard to support creative teaching rather than a straight-jacket.

They provide the foundation for learning and knowledge. It is through books that we gain an understanding of the world around us.

They give us information about other cultures and times, promote imagination and creativity, stimulate our thoughts and emotions, and inspire us to explore new possibilities. Moreover, books play an important role in developing language skills. By reading, we learn new words and improve our grammar and pronunciation.

There's this common belief that teachers dislike worksheets as much as the students do. So, it's important to recognize that student books are not worksheets. While they are very similar in nature, the connected storyline between each book makes them more enjoyable for the students. The topics relate to one another, so instead of handing a random worksheet to your students, they are able to connect the writing task with the math, reading, etc. tasks as well. This makes the subject matter not only more enjoyable, but also engages the students into the content they're studying. It also opens up room for discussion throughout your other lesson plans.

Teaching is definitely one of the hardest professions out there. The students are the future, and providing them with optimal learning opportunities is imperative. However, the extremely long hours required of a teacher can actually cause a decrease in the quality of education provided. Student books allow teachers to follow curriculum standards so they can invest their time more fully into their classroom. Students can become active participants as opposed to passive ones where they simply receive instructions or information. Web based tools can be used for providing demonstrations and examples that can help students credence in what they are learning. The role of educational CD's in the field of education is four fold :it is included as a part of curriculum, as an instructional delivery systems,as a means of aiding instructions and also as a tool to enhance the entire learning process. Education has gone from passive and reactive to interactive and aggressive. It is geared towards creating curiosity in the minds of students. It helps students to understand and retain concepts better. CD allows distant learning which literally means that it deliver a 'classroom' in the homes. Teacher can establish credibility in what they are teaching. It provide distance learners with online communities, live chat rooms and bulletin boards. It allows students to collaborate and communicate even though they are isolated in their own space. CD-ROM based training have helped eliminate the need for an instructor based lesson plans. Students can grasp concepts faster ,proceed and move along , without being held back by ones who need more time and help for learning. Such individual pacing is beneficial to all. It allows students to put into practice information quickly and with better results. Students can save time and increase their productivity. Educational CD's can include demos , feed backs that can help the students to reflect on what they have learned. In all these ways educational CD's plays a major role in a student's life.
