It is a mistake to believe that the word "essay" came to us from English. In fact, it has French roots, but this word was introduced into English culture by a world-famous philosopher and politician. In England, this genre became a part of journalism and gained great popularity in the 18th and 19th centuries. An essay is a short prose text that expresses a person's subjective reaction to an event. English includes an introduction, body and conclusion. characters Any genre has its own pattern in its structure, and the English essay is no exception. The writing style is formed based on certain features. With their help, you can easily determine that there is nothing more than this genre of literature in front of you. [1]Knowing the characteristics of the genre also helps to better understand its structure and helps to determine which components should be in this type of composition. Let's look at the elements that distinguish the essay from other genres of literature: Narrow focus. This type of work, unlike other genres of literature, cannot cover a number of issues. Rather, it aims to reveal an issue, but very deeply. Subjectivity. This genre is not intended to show how everyone reacts to a problem, it is intended to show the opinion of one person, to reveal the attitude of an individual, not society. The essay evaluates not the information that the author gives us, but his internal qualities, the ability to think logically, his worldview and everything that distinguishes him from other people. [2]What types of essays are there in English? The general purpose of writing an essay in English is to express your opinion about some event, process or object. But you can express your opinion in different ways: find positive and negative aspects of objects, look for positive and negative aspects.

So, there are several types of essays in English: Opinion or opinion essay - in which you need to express your opinion about something specific, a question was asked. The problem is that in writing this type of essay, it is important to be able to find different approaches to the problem, to be able to look at it from different angles. He cannot defend his position in this essay. For and against, or For and against essays. A type of essay that makes a person look at the subject from two sides. Nothing is completely perfect or completely cruel. Therefore, you should be able to find both bad and good side in any question. You need to learn how to write this type of essay in English very well, the exam involves writing it. [3] Suggest ways to solve a problem or propose a solution to a problem. The main problems are always global negative events environment and society. After a thorough examination of a particular problem, the student must propose a solution. How many parts is the essay divided into? Since school, we know that a text usually consists of several parts: an introduction, the body of the text, and conclusions. An essay has the same structure, but unlike a simple story, it should be shorter, while still containing as much information as possible. more facts and subjective evidence. The whole content of the work is a coherent chain of statements and arguments for them. Logic is the main quality that helps a child write an essay in English. USE tests not only knowledge but also reasoning ability. Introduction An introduction is an important component of story structure. It is in this part that the author describes the problem he has set, and tries to convey to the reader how it relates to the problem raised in the main part. It also lists the main points and facts raised in the introduction. The introduction should be as short as possible and contain the main elements of the problem. In addition, at the same time, the examiner develops in his mind a psychological picture of the subject. English essay reveals the way of thinking of a person. Body This should contain all your thoughts on the question asked. The main part of the text is the "proof - proof" chain. You can't talk about any event or thing if you can't prove it. It is necessary to divide the text into paragraphs in order to correctly structure and logically present the information. Needless to say, at the time of writing, the arguments in the main body represent two opposites. And only with the correct structure of the text, you can write an essay in English. Conclusion The conclusion is what conclusions were drawn when considering the issue. It is in this part that you should summarize all the results of your opinion. [4] Write down the general rules previously reinforced in the introduction and explained in the body. Use linking words to show that this is the end of the essay and that you are summarizing everything you have written so far. As you can see, the structure of the English essay should be taken into account when writing. What is the writing plan? By following a specific writing plan, it becomes easier for a student to focus and not get frustrated. In fact, any essay is a text structured according to some logical rules. It is important to be able to use both deductive (analyzing information from general to specific) and inductive (specific to general) methods of logical reasoning. If the work is based on logic, then a plan is an important part of preparation in writing an essay in English. Below is the writing algorithm: Think carefully about the question to be discussed in the essay. Determine how you feel about this issue (make an introduction). Highlight the facts that best define the problem at hand. Support your facts with clear evidence. To structure the text, choose a separate paragraph for each fact and argument. Highlight all the important points of the essay in the conclusion. We have prepared several recommendations for easy and effective essay writing. By following them, you can not only learn to write an essay in English, but also understand how to manage the text: English essay topics are very diverse, so develop your knowledge by reading books and encyclopedias. Learn to understand English grammar and try to memorize as much vocabulary as possible. Bad sentence structure and low vocabulary are immediately visible and show that you don't know the language. Always keep a draft with you, but you should be able to use it wisely. Do not try to write an entire essay there first, then rewrite it in a clean copy. Instead, make a plan to write a draft with an essay in English, the most important facts and arguments for them. Do not forget that it plays a very important role. Unstructured text looks ugly, and most importantly, it confuses and does not allow you to put information on the shelves. The style of this genre is formal, but if you find it difficult to write in formal language, then you can choose semi-formal, but in no case do not use slang forms of communication. Conciseness is not always a bad quality, it is important to choose the main information in the essay and make the text as informative as possible and as less awkward as possible. [5] Always remember that you should not only write the text, but also proofread it. Calculate the optimal time you should write, taking into account rereading. Any facts you cover should be valid and logical. Learn to express your thoughts properly. Never present facts that you do not know or know very little about. Make sure the words you type are correct. Learn linking words that connect parts of text and flow smoothly through them. Remember that clichés are common in English essays (We can't ignore it..., It must be admitted..., Moreover..., According to some experts). Be flexible in your beliefs. Since the essay shows a subjective perception of the proposed problem, never assert that you are completely right, because other people have their own opinion on the matter, and it may not match yours. Also, do not touch on slippery topics, including politics, religion, etc. Introductory phrases: what they are and how they can help an English essay includes standard usage that helps the writer form his opinion, emphasize the importance of the statement or objectivity in his evaluations. They are called introductory phrases. With their help, the essay will be more structured and lively. There are many introductory phrases for each part of the statement. For example, in the introduction, phrases that attract the reader's attention are used (Many people think ... but others disagree), in the main part, comparison phrases are used (On the other hand), in the conclusion, try to draw conclusions the expressions showing are relevant (To conclude). Be sure to use the options above, they will help you express your thoughts clearly.

The most common mistakes Writing an essay in English is not without flaws, and it is important to take this fact into account, because whoever is warned is armed. Carefully study the list of the most common mistakes given below and draw a conclusion for yourself: see which of the listed mistakes are absent and which ones need to be worked on. So you can find out your weaknesses and try to fix them. The most common mistakes are:

- Boring beginning of the story. It is very important to interest the reviewer from the first lines, to show that he is reading the essay not just because he needs to be evaluated, but because he has found useful information for himself.
- Your work is not personally verified. Only by re-reading the text can you find flaws and missing elements in it. When a person re-reads what is written, he perceives it as a whole. Don't forget to take the time to proofread the essay.
- The essay is based on unsubstantiated facts. Less is better, but better. Choose only the facts that you can prove correctly.
- The problem is not completely solved. Despite the variety of English essay topics ("Animals in the zoo. What do you think about it", "Computer games. Pros and cons", learn to fully disclose your position.
- You are trying to be something that you are not. Always write essays from a pure heart and speak only your opinion. Only then will you be accepted as a person.

and against" in more detail. The previous article dealt with the so-called , so I propose to deal with the main question first: how do they differ. The names themselves tell us about the main difference: the main task opinion essays This is a reasonable explanation of your point of view on the question proposed to you, so let me remind you that our task in writing this type of essay is to take one of the possible points of view and discuss it as structured and coherent as possible.

Conclusion:

When it comes to writing, it's completely different. Pros and Cons Essays: A key rule to remember when starting to write this type of essay is that making your point of view clear is not required or even encouraged. The main task is to maintain an unbiased position on the issue you are discussing, so your task is to present both arguments and counterarguments, hence the name of this type of essay. As a rule, it is much easier to argue with a point of view that we agree with, so this type of essay can be considered a little more difficult, because here we have to present equally strong arguments for two opposing points of view.
